a. ADB is the sum of all End-of-day Account Balances in a particular calendar month, divided by the number of days in that month. "End-of-day Account Balance" means your account balance at 23:59 each day. If there are n days in a calendar month and X1, X2, X3, …, Xn are the End-of-day Account Balances from Day 1 to Day n respectively, the ADB for the account will be:

$$\frac{X1 + X2 + X3 + \ldots + Xn}{n}$$

For example, if the End-of-day Account Balance for each day between 1 November 2026 and 15 November 2026 is S$0, and the End-of-day Account Balance for each day between 16 November 2026 and 30 November 2026 is S$200,000, the ADB for the account in November 2026 will be:

$$\frac{(S$\ 0 \times 15) + (S$200{,}000 \times 15)}{30 \text{ (being no. of days in November)}} = S$100{,}000.00$$
